AN INDEX GUIDE TO THE SHELF CLASSIFICATION OF THE HARVARD COLLEGE LIBRARY

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

INDEX OF SHELF-MARKS

A few notes on the classification systems in use in the Harvard Library, and on their history, are necessary, in order to explain the character of the shelf-marks indexed in this Guide.

A. Down to 1877, the books of the Library were shelved in alcoves, each alcove devoted to a general subject, but no attempt at minute classification was made. The shelf-mark (e.g. 47.13) indicated the number of the alcove and the number of the shelf. The alcove numbers ran from 1 to 51, and many half-numbers were interpolated for alcoves which had been subdivided as the Library grew. (See pp. 15-16.) Books which have not yet been reclassified still bear these numbers, and in calling for them, it is necessary to give the title of the book wanted, since the mark indicates only the shelf and not the individual book.

B. In 1878 a reclassification of the books in the Library was begun, and in the course of the next three or four years American History, British History, English Literature, French History and Literature, German History and Literature, Language, Classical Philology, (including the history, antiquities, literary history and philosophy of Greece and Rome) were arranged and the books re-numbered. These classes were placed on the second, third, fourth, and fifth floors of the new East stack.

The system of numbering adopted was on the fixed location plan, each number indicating a particular shelf, and a second number, separated from the first by a period, indicating the particular book on that shelf. The numbers are of the general form 12485.7—this being the number of the 7th book on the 5th shelf of the 8th division of the 12th row on the 4th floor. The figure in the third place at the left of the point always indicates the floor; the figure or figures to the left of this, the number of the row; and the two figures at the right, the division and shelf. The books were carefully and somewhat closely classified, each subject division occupying a shelf, or part of a shelf, or several shelves, according to its character. Empty shelves and parts of shelves were left for growth. So long as the subdivisions did not outgrow the space allotted them, the system worked admirably, and no better scheme can be devised for quickly finding a book when its number is given. With the increase of the Library, however, the various subdivisions grew unevenly and unexpectedly, and finally could be contained no longer within the bounds assigned them. In the classes in which this has occurred most often, it has been found necessary, after trying several makeshifts, to arrange the books strictly in the order of their shelf-numbers, irrespective of whether the numbers follow in the same order as the subdivisions or in the reverse order. In these classes, the classification, though originally easy to follow, has now become much confused, and it is evident that eventually all the classes arranged on this system will have to be renumbered. In the meantime, the table of numbers on pages 17 to 19 shows where these books may be found. The fact that the floor is indicated by a figure in the middle of the number accounts for the apparent mingling of classes when the numbers are placed in numerical sequence.

C. It was expected that the reclassification begun in 1878 would be carried on rapidly, but in 1881 it was brought for the time almost to a standstill because of lack of space in the building. With the beginning of the reclassification a temporary general division into nine classes had been established for books currently received which did not belong to the classes in process of rearrangement. These were numbered with the Roman numerals I to IX. Many of these books have since been transferred to newly arranged classes, but others still remain under their temporary number, and their present position in the Library is shown in the table on page 20.

D. The "fixed location" system of numbering having proved itself impracticable, all classes which have been arranged since 1881 have been numbered on a system in which a number or group of numbers indicates, not a particular shelf or shelves, but a particular subject division of the class. Each class is designated by an abbreviation, and the shelf-mark consists of this abbreviation, followed by a number which indicates the subdivision of the class and the special author and volume in that subdivision. These abbreviations, with their meanings and the present location of the groups which they designate, make up the alphabetical list on pages 20 to 25. Included among them are certain similar abbreviations used to designate different parts of the building; for example, RR to indicate the Reading-room; A, B, C, and D for the four alcoves of the cataloguing department, etc. Under this system of classification, the Library is divided into a number of groups, each independent of the others, and each capable of being moved from one part of the building to another, or of being installed in a different building, without any change of marks.

The reclassification of the Library is still incomplete, and cannot for the present be finished, because of lack of space and lack of sufficient staff. When it is taken up again, the work will be continued on the same line as that which has been followed since 1881.

INDEX OF SUBJECTS

In this index no great detail is attempted; the main classes, and the principal subdivisions under them are covered, but no names of places, except the larger country divisions, and no names of persons are included. Local and personal indexes are being compiled in connection with each general subdivision, but will probably not be put into print. The subjects not yet classified are not included in this index. The principal classes which still await classification are: Bibliography (general and by countries), Oriental History, Geography and Literature, Political Science, General History and Biography, Theology, Biblical Studies, Ecclesiastical History, Religion, Law, Medicine, Agriculture and Horticulture, Forestry, and several smaller groups, such as Sports and Games, Secret Societies, Spiritism, Rhetoric, etc.

It should be remembered that this Index only supplements, and does not supplant, the Index to the Subject Catalogue. The latter directs the inquirer to the place in the catalogue where a complete survey of the literature of a subject may be found, regardless of the place in which the books may be shelved, whether in Gore Hall or in one of the departmental libraries, and regardless of the way in which the material has been published, whether independently or in periodicals or otherwise.

The Index to the Shelf Classification, on the other hand, sends the inquirer straight to the shelves where he may expect to find all the separately published literature of his subject, but not articles in periodicals and in composite works, and not books and pamphlets necessarily shelved in other parts of the library.

If the Subject Catalogue in some cases fails to reveal the full riches of the Library, it is because in certain directions it has lately not been kept fully abreast with current accessions. By experience, the inquirer learns in what cases the Subject Catalogue is the better guide, and in what cases an examination of the books on the shelves is more useful.

WILLIAM COOLIDGE LANE,
